INTRODUCTION

Commemorating the Independence Day of the Republic of Indonesia on August 17 is crucial momentum for all Indonesians (Andriyanto et al., 2025; Herlina et al., 2023; Zara, 2025). In addition to reflecting the heroes' struggle, this moment strengthens a sense of togetherness, solidarity, and love for the country. One form of celebration often carried out is a friendly activity and giving gifts to the society participating in competitions or other social activities. The community is enthusiastic about welcoming Independence Day by holding various activities such as competitions, parades, and art performances to celebrate Indonesian independence. On the night of the Independence Day commemoration, the Indonesians commonly hold a tradition of thanksgiving or what is better known as a night of tirakatan. Tradition is a habit carried out continuously by the community, individually and in groups (Al Ayyubi, Masfuroh, et al., 2025; Al Ayyubi, Nurhikmah, et al., 2025; Fuad & Masuwd, 2023). Village communities hold a tradition of a night of tirakatan at the same time on the night of Independence Day. Tirakatan activities are one of the forums that can strengthen community solidarity.

Friendly activities and giving gifts are not only limited to ceremonial celebrations but also have a deeper value in building social harmony. Giving gifts and friendly activities in tirakatan also contains deep meaning related to social harmony. Mauss (1925), in his theory of "The Gift," stated that giving gifts is not only a material transaction but also a symbolic act that strengthens social relationships. In the context of tirakatan, giving gifts shows concern and strengthens brotherhood ties between residents. Tirakatan can be understood as a cultural praxis in creating togetherness across generations. This tradition teaches the values given to history, togetherness, and cooperation to the younger generation. Therefore, tirakatan is a ceremonial and social educational medium that strengthens society's collective values. In social development, tirakatan can be seen as a form of social capital (social capital) that strengthens social networks and trust between residents (Djubaedi et al., 2022; Mawadda et al., 2023; Muhaemin et al., 2023; Sari et al., 2022; Wiyani, 2022). States that social interaction in traditional activities like this can increase citizen participation in community life. Therefore, tirakatan can potentially encourage the creation of a more harmonious and cohesive society.

Amidst the diversity of Indonesian society, the activities that have been discussed previously become a space to establish relationships, strengthen solidarity, and foster a sense of mutual respect between citizens. This event often creates an atmosphere of familiarity, where all elements of society, regardless of social, economic, or cultural background, can interact in an atmosphere full of happiness (Musaldin & Purnamasari, 2024). In addition, this activity also has a positive impact on strengthening the spirit of cooperation. The preparation for the implementation of the event involves various parties, from the committee to the general public to children. This collaboration is a real means of implementing the values of Pancasila, such as unity, social justice, and deliberation to reach a consensus. However, even though these activities reflect local values relevant to strengthening social solidarity amidst the dynamics of modern life, several challenges need to be anticipated (Firmansyah et al., 2023; Fuad & Masuwd, 2023; Syamsuriah & Ardi, 2022). For example, uneven involvement between certain age groups or social strata can create a sense of alienation, especially for younger generations or marginalized groups. In addition, careful planning has the potential to result in a waste of resources that can burden communities with limited budgets. Therefore, it is crucial to consider inclusive and efficient strategies in implementing these activities. Strengthening this tradition can be a strategic step in maintaining social harmony and integrity, especially in rural communities.

Bontoboddia Hamlet, Lempangang Village, Bajeng District, Gowa Regency, is one of the areas that routinely holds August 17 celebrations with various activities. The community in this area has a unique tradition of commemorating Independence Day through friendly activities and giving gifts to competition participants and residents who contribute. This tradition reflects the spirit of cooperation and togetherness among the community. However, in recent years, various challenges have begun to emerge, such as the lack of participation of the younger generation, budget constraints, and differences of opinion in planning activities. This phenomenon could reduce the essence of togetherness, which is the main goal of the celebration. In addition, the influence of modernization and individualism are also factors that influence the activeness of the community in this kind of social activity. Therefore, it is critical to understand how friendly activities and giving gifts can strengthen the solidarity and togetherness of the Bontoboddia Hamlet community. This study aims to explore more deeply the role of these activities in creating positive social interactions, fostering a sense of unity, and providing solutions to the challenges faced in their implementation. Thus, this research is expected to contribute to understanding the social dynamics of the Bontoboddia Hamlet community and become a reference for improving the quality of similar activities.

METHOD

This study employs a qualitative approach (Creswell & Creswell, 2017), to explore social phenomena related to strengthening community solidarity and togetherness through friendly activities and gift-giving in the context of celebrating Independence Day on August 17. This approach was selected due to its ability to deeply explore the community's meaning, experience, and perception. The research's design used is descriptive qualitative, which aims to describe the role of friendly activities and gift-giving in strengthening social relations and increasing the spirit of community togetherness. The data of this research are: 1) The organizing committee of the August 17th event from Karang Taruna Boto Lempangang. 2) Participants in the competition and prize recipients. 3) Community leaders or leaders of Lempangang Village. 4) Residents who participated in the friendly activities. In terms of the research location, the research was conducted in one of the communities or villages that actively organize a series of Independence Day commemoration activities so that it can describe the dynamics and their impact on the community (Alimuddin et al., 2023). Data collection techniques, including: 1) In-depth Interviews, conducted with the committee, community leaders, and residents to understand the motivation for organizing activities and their views on the influence of activities on community togetherness. 2) Participatory Observation: the researchers directly observed the friendly activities and gift, gift-giving and social interactions between residents. 3) The atmosphere of togetherness created during the event. 4) Documentation: Collecting photos, videos, and other documents, such as minutes of committee meetings or activity reports, to support data from observations and interviews.

Data were analyzed using a thematic analysis approach with the following steps: 1) Data Reduction, sorting data from interviews, observations, and documentation to find relevant main themes. 2) Data Presentation, organizing data in the form of descriptive narratives to facilitate interpretation. 3) Conclusion Drawing and concluding research results based on patterns and themes related to strengthening community solidarity and togetherness. To ensure the validity of the data, this study used the following techniques: 1) Source Triangulation: Comparing data from various sources (interviews, observations, and documentation). 2) Extension of Participation: Researchers were present during the preparation process to implementation to understand the context as a whole. 3) Peer Discussion: Involving discussions with experts or colleagues to validate findings (Anggito & Setiawan, 2018; Nadirah et al., 2022; Purwono et al., 2019).

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

Strengthening Solidarity through Social Interaction

Friendly activities are one form of social interaction that effectively strengthens solidarity and togetherness (Jamil, 2023). In line with the theory of social interaction, this activity emphasizes the importance of direct communication to create closer relationships. In the context of the celebration of Independence Day on August 17 in Bontoboddia Hamlet, friendly activities are a formal meeting place and a moment that connects residents personally and emotionally. Residents from various age backgrounds and professions gather in a relaxed atmosphere, sharing stories, experiences, and happiness, thus creating a sense of belonging.

In addition, this activity allows for the building of familiarity involving all elements of society, including community leaders, youth, and children. Those who previously rarely communicated or perhaps did not know each other can establish new relationships (Ningrum, 2021). More than just a physical meeting, friendly activities also facilitate deeper feelings of empathy and solidarity. These activities allow residents to show their care, share happiness, and strengthen the spirit of cooperation characteristic of Indonesian society. Socializing activities are an effective medium for building solidarity, in line with the theory of social interaction which states that direct communication can create closer relationships. This study found that through socializing activities, residents not only participate physically but also emotionally, thus strengthening social ties in their environment. This is evident from residents' enthusiasm for attending the socializing activities, as seen in the picture.

The study results show that through social activities, the society of Bontoboddia Hamlet not only participates physically in meetings but also emotionally. Many residents feel respected, recognized, and welcomed as community members. This strengthens their social ties and creates a more harmonious and togetherness-filled environment. Thus, social activities are not only a tradition in celebrating independence but also become the foundation for forming a solid, harmonious, and mutually supportive society.

Symbolic Value of Giving Gifts

Gifting gifts in the celebration of Independence Day on August 17 in Bontoboddia Hamlet is interpreted in terms of material value and the symbolic value contained therein. Gifts are a form of appreciation for residents' participation, efforts, and contributions in competitions and other activities. Giving these awards creates a sense of community appreciation and recognition, thus positively impacting individual motivation to continue participating in social activities.

Research findings show that awards given publicly, witnessed by other residents, can strengthen a sense of belonging to the community. This aligns with the concept in sociology, which states that awards motivate individuals and build collective solidarity. In the Bontoboddia Hamlet community, giving prizes triggers a healthy competitive spirit, encourages wider participation, and fosters a sense of shared pride in the success achieved. Moreover, these prizes also become a symbol of the spirit of cooperation, where all elements of society support the success of the implementation of the activity. For example, residents who do not directly participate in the competition feel connected through their contributions to helping the activity or providing moral support (Khamdan et al., 2024). Thus, prizes become more than just material awards; they reflect the values of solidarity, togetherness, and deep mutual respect in society. Giving prizes is important in strengthening collective motivation and building stronger social cohesion.

Series of Friendly Event Performances

In a series of activities to celebrate Independence Day on August 17 in Bontoboddia Hamlet, art and cultural performances are one of the sub-activities that help strengthen community solidarity and togetherness. Art performances, such as regional dances, traditional music, or drama performances, serve as entertainment and a medium to express local cultural identity, which is part of the local community's pride.

The Paddupa dance performance performed by the Karang Taruna Lempangang children was the event's opening and an additional spirit at the beginning of the activity. In the celebration of August 17, the Paddupa Dance functions as entertainment and a symbol of togetherness and community solidarity. Through this dance, the community can feel the power of the local culture that is their identity. In addition, the Paddupa Dance performance also introduces the younger generation to traditions passed down from generation to generation so that they increasingly appreciate and preserve their regional culture. The Paddupa Dance performance in the celebration of Independence Day is more than just a spectacle (Muhtarom et al., 2021). It becomes a medium to express the spirit of unity and togetherness and strengthen social ties in the society of Bontoboddia Hamlet. This dance serves as a reminder to society that togetherness and mutual collaboration must be maintained and kept in everyday life, not just during festivities but also during larger social events.

The performance of drama in the celebration of Independence Day on August 17 in Bontoboddia Hamlet is one of the important elements that enliven the event while conveying moral and historical messages to the community. The dramas that are performed often revolve around the theme of the struggle for independence, national values, and the spirit of unity and cooperation. Although lighter and more entertaining, drama has the power to touch the audience's emotions and leave a deep impression regarding the meaning of independence and togetherness. Through drama, the society of Bontoboddia Hamlet celebrates independence and emphasizes their commitment to the noble values that the nation's heroes have inherited. Although simple, the performance of this drama is part of the learning process and strengthening of social identity that builds togetherness in the community.

Figure 7. Acoustic Duet

The acoustic duet is one of the most popular musical elements in the celebration of Independence Day on August 17 in Bontoboddia Hamlet. This performance involves two singers or musicians collaborating, accompanied by a simple musical instrument, an acoustic guitar. Acoustic duets provide a more intimate and familiar nuance, making the audience emotionally close to the performers. In addition to being a form of entertainment, acoustic duets in this celebration also have a symbolic meaning (Jovani, 2023). Soft acoustic music and harmonious vocal blends create a warm and togetherness atmosphere. Through this performance, the musicians entertain and invite the public to get to know and appreciate local music culture better and absorb the meaning of their songs.

The performance of the 4 Ethnic Dance is an important part of the series of events celebrating Independence Day on August 17 in Bontoboddia Hamlet. This dance depicts the richness of Indonesian culture, consisting of various tribes and ethnicities with multiple traditions and arts. In this celebration, this dance is not only entertainment but also a symbol of the unity and diversity of the Indonesian nation. The 4 Ethnic Dance has a very important symbolic value in celebrating independence because it highlights the cultural diversity in Indonesia and shows how this diversity can unite in the spirit of nationalism. Although each dance comes from a different culture, all are performed in a series of unified events, creating a picture that Indonesia. However, various tribes, religions, and cultures remain united. Through the 4 Ethnic Dance, the society of Bontoboddia Hamlet is invited to reflect on the meaning of independence, not only as freedom from colonialism but also as the freedom to celebrate differences and maintain unity within it. The performance of this dance is proof that cultural diversity can enrich a sense of togetherness and strengthen solidarity in community life.

The performances provided are an opportunity for various groups in the community to show the creativity of Lempangang residents, be they children, teenagers, or adults. Activities like this create a sense of belonging and unity because each group feels they have contributed to the event's success. Moreover, the art performances have a symbolic role that enriches the community's understanding of the meaning of togetherness, especially when held in a lively and together atmosphere. In addition to being a place for expression, the performances in the series of events also function as a means of cultural education. Residents, especially the younger generation, can learn more about and preserve the traditions and local cultural values in Bontoboddia Hamlet. This art performance is a means of interaction between the older and younger generations, thus fostering a sense of pride in their cultural heritage. The importance of art performances in this celebratory event can also be seen from its impact on social relations between residents. When groups or individuals display their artwork, they show their talents and cooperation within the group. This creates an atmosphere of mutual respect between residents, both those who perform and those who watch. Thus, the performance of arts and culture is not only entertainment but also a means to strengthen social relations, create a sense of togetherness, and strengthen the spirit of cooperation characteristic of the Bontoboddia Hamlet community. As part of this series of events, the performance ultimately enhances the essence of the independence celebration through competitions, prizes, and arts and culture involving all levels of society. This shows that togetherness and solidarity are created from formal activities and cultural expressions that arouse a sense of unity.

Solutions to Challenges

To overcome the challenges faced in implementing the August 17 celebration activities in Bontoboddia Hamlet, several strategies can be applied as follows:

Table 1. Solutions to solving problems in this activity

Strategy		Description
Creatively Generation	Involving the Young	One of the challenges faced is the lack of involvement of the young generation in celebration activities. To overcome this, the committee can integrate technology-based elements and social media that are more attractive to young society. For example, the committee can hold digital-based competitions, such as creative video competitions, vlogs, or even social media challenges related to independence. In addition, using social media to promote activities, invite participation, and share celebration moments can increase young society's awareness and involvement. In this way, the young generation can feel more involved while helping to spread the spirit of togetherness to the wider community.
Independent Fundraising		Budget limitations often hinder organizing large activities (Rohmah & Djunaidi, 2022). Therefore, independent fundraising is an effective solution to support the smooth running of the event. One way to do this is by involving local sponsors from micro, small, and medium enterprises (MSMEs) around Bontoboddia Hamlet or companies that care about social activities. In addition, fundraising through crowdfunding platforms can open up opportunities to gain support from the wider community. Utilizing existing technology and networks allows the necessary funds to be collected more efficiently without relying on the government budget or limited external assistance.

Improving Communication and Coordination To avoid potential conflicts and minimize misperceptions between the committee and residents, it is important to enhance communication and coordination.

One way is to hold regular discussions or periodic meetings between the activity committee and residents. Residents can provide input, express opinions, and prepare work plans in this meeting more clearly and transparently. Open discussions involving all parties can also avoid misunderstandings or conflicts that are detrimental to the smooth running of the event. In addition, improving coordination can create a sense of togetherness and shared responsibility in making the celebration successful.

The event committee for the August 17 celebration in Bontoboddia Hamlet worked as a team that supported each other and worked together. With solid cooperation and clear division of tasks, they organized an event celebrating independence and strengthening community solidarity and togetherness. By implementing these strategies, challenges in implementing activities can be overcome more effectively. This will increase community participation and enhance the spirit of cooperation and solidarity that is the core of every Independence Day celebration (Nurhikmah, Indo Santalia, 2023).

Overall, the August 17 celebration activities in Bontoboddia Hamlet have proven effective in fostering a sense of togetherness and solidarity among the community. This moment is not just a ceremonial event but also a means for residents to interact with each other, share happiness, and strengthen their social ties. The community participates physically and emotionally in various activities, such as competitions, friendly gatherings, gifts, and art performances, feeling a shared pride in the achievements made in these activities. Moreover, the celebration of August 17 provides a new spirit for the community to work together in other aspects of social life. Through the cooperation activities, residents learn to overcome differences, strengthen relationships between individuals, and contribute together to achieve common goals. This creates a more harmonious and mutually supportive social, economic, and cultural atmosphere (Astutik, 2023; Fan et al., 2023; Firdaus & Suwendi, 2025; Ginting et al., 2023; Hutabarat, 2023).

The significance of this activity in fostering a sense of community appears not only at the event but also in the years that follow. The spirit that emerges during the August 17 celebration motivates the community to be more engaged in other social activities, enhance existing social networks, and build deeper relationships between people, families, and groups in society (Cao & Yu, 2023; Newman & Skocpol, 2023; Nohutlu et al., 2023). Therefore, the August 17 celebration activity is to commemorate independence and strengthen the foundation of solidarity and togetherness that will continue to develop in the daily lives of the Bontoboddia Hamlet community.

CONCLUSION

Based on the study results, the social gathering and gift-giving activities in the celebration of Independence Day on August 17 significantly strengthen community solidarity and togetherness. The main conclusions of this study are as follows: 1) Social gathering creates a space for residents to communicate with each other, build closer relationships, and foster a sense of mutual care. This moment is an effective means to increase intimacy between residents who rarely interact in everyday life. 2) Giving gifts is not just a form of material appreciation but also a symbol of respect for the efforts and contributions of residents. This motivates the community to actively participate in activities, while instilling the values of togetherness and mutual respect. 3) Through this activity, the community feels a high spirit of cooperation. They come together to prepare and celebrate activities, thus creating stronger social ties. 4) Several challenges, such as the lack of involvement of the younger generation, budget constraints, and minor conflicts in planning, can be overcome with a creative approach, collaboration, and better communication between the committee and residents.

For the sustainability and development of similar activities, some recommendations that can be made include involving the younger generation with innovations in technology-based activities or arts and culture, optimizing fundraising through collaboration with local sponsors, improving coordination and communication between residents to avoid conflict, and increasing collective participation. Through strengthening solidarity and togetherness, the August 17 celebration activities are a moment of historical commemoration and a means of enhancing the community's social identity as a united nation with a spirit of cooperation.
